

Anne Butera calls herself a “joy collector.” She’s an artist, maker and gardener who lives with her husband in the beautiful driftless region of southwest Wisconsin where she strives to discover the beauty and magic in each day.

Anne writes the blog My Giant Strawberry; teaches in person and online; and sells her art, designs and fabric on her website and elsewhere on the web.

Anne’s paintings have been exhibited across the country and her art and writing have been published in magazines and in the book Botanica.

Anne began writing Joy Lists eight years ago as a way to find hope during a difficult period of her life. That practice has been transformative and Anne is delighted to share it with you.

today I am grateful for:

today's joys:

magic I've discovered:

